Calling all aspiring nurses and allied health professionals!

Allied health assistants provide support to health professionals including physiotherapists, occupational therapists and speech pathologists. They focus on rehabilitation and promoting optimal health.

They may work with patients as they carry out routine physiotherapy or hydrotherapy exercises with individuals or groups.

Other roles include helping to implement general care and assisting with ongoing therapy as directed, as well as working with patients in recreational and leisure activities.

Allied health assistants may also support the training of disabled persons in self-care and daily living activities.

Work is not limited to hospitals. Allied health assistants can also find employment in community health, rehabilitation centres or undertaking home visits.

STUDY @ RMIT

RMIT is a leader in technology, design, global business, communication, global communities, health solutions and urban sustainable futures.

This program offers exciting pathways. As the program is offered over 2 years, students who complete the program during years 10 and 11 can advance their studies by taking higher education in a VCE program in nursing at RMIT.

Students who undertake the program in year 11 and 12 can also advance into the Diploma of Allied Health as well as many other Diplomas and Bachelor’s. This is a brilliant opportunity for students to commence an educational pathway with RMIT University.
