ARTS & SUSTAINABILITY RESEARCH GROUP

CALL FOR INTEREST FROM STAFF, POSTGRADUATE STUDENTS & ALUMNI

There are a number of people in the School of Art, RMIT University whose research - whether studio based, or in the theoretical field, has a strong focus on the natural, or non-human world. That is to say, in areas such as landscape, human-animal relations and issues of embodiment and materiality, ecological sustainability, the imagery and poetics of nature, or the critique of consumption. Those of us with an interest in this field of research are interested in hearing from postgraduate students or students from the school’s alumni who have a sustained research interest in this field.

We are also interested in making contact with people from other schools at RMIT University who share a research interest in sustainability.

Should you wish to make contact with us, or find out more about the group, please contact Dr Linda Williams.
