Local–Global is a collaborative international journal concerned with the resilience and difficulties of contemporary social life. It draws together groups of researchers and practitioners located in different communities across the world to critically address issues concerning the relationship between the global and the local.

It emphasizes the following social themes and overarching issues that inform daily life over time and space:
- Authority–Participation
- Belonging–Mobility
- Equality–Wealth Distribution
- Freedom–Obligation
- Identity–Difference
- Inclusion–Exclusion
- Local Knowledges–Expert Systems
- Mediation–Disconnectedness
- Past–Present
- Power–Subjection
- Security–Risk
- Wellbeing–Adversity

This issue of Local–Global was produced in association with the Department for Community Development, Papua New Guinea
LOCAL—GLOBAL Volume Five 2009

Introduction: Projecting Community-Life

Urban and Peri-urban Communities

- Vanagi Settlement, Central Province
- Divinai Village, Milne Bay Province
- Kananam Community, Madang Province
- Yalu Village and Surrounds, Morobe Province

Hinterland Communities

- Tokain Group of Villages, Madang Province
- Boera Village, Central Province
- Inuma and Alepa Villages, Central Province
- Vanapa Village, Central Province

Remote Communities

- Wisini Group of Villages, Morobe Province
- Omarakana and Kiriwina Island, Milne Bay Province
- Yule Island, Central Province

---

Authors for this issue: Paul James, Victoria Stead, Yaso Nadarajah and Karen Haive.

Editor for this issue: Paul James.

Series editors: Martin Mulligan, Yaso Nadarajah and Peter Phipps (RMIT University).

Associate editors: Thangavelu Vasantha Kumaran (Chennai) and John Callinan (Hamilton).

Managing editor: Todd Bennet

General editor: Paul James.

Copy editor and proofreader: Todd Bennet.

International advisory board: Professor Perry Anderson (University of California), Dr Alan Chun (Academica Sinica), Professor Jonathan Friedman (Ecoles des Hautes Etudes en Sciences Social), Emeritus Professor Jack Goody (Cambridge University), Professor Krishan Kumar (University of Virginia), Professor David Lyon (Queens University), Professor Walter Mignolo (Duke University), Professor Juliet Mitchell (Cambridge University), Ashis Nandy (Centre for the Study of Developing Societies), Professor Brendan O’Leary (University of Pennsylvania), Professor Fazal Rizvi (University of Illinois), Professor Jan Aart Scholte (University of Warwick), Professor Peter Sellers (University of California), Professor Manfred Steger (RMIT University and University of Hawai’i), Professor Jukka Siikala (University of Helsinki), Professor Gayatri Spivak (Columbia University).
Local–Global welcomes contributions from interested authors and researchers. Authors should consult the style guide in the back of this edition. Please email contributions as a Microsoft Word file to globalism@rmit.edu.au.

Local–Global is published by the Globalism Research Centre, RMIT University, GPO Box 2476V, Melbourne, Australia, 3001. www.rmit.edu.au/globalism.

JOURNAL WEBSITE www.rmit.edu.au/globalism/publications/journal

ISSN 1832-6919

PRINTED BY Arena Printing and Publishing, 2 Kerr St, Fitzroy, 3065
Acknowledgements

When we commenced a partnership between two different countries and organizations, we were united by a single purpose—how we could work together to contribute towards building more sustainable communities. Based upon the energetic support and guidance of many people, we present this volume as building upon the draft report that we presented in 2007 to Dame Carol Kidu, Minister for the Department for Community Development, Papua New Guinea. This publication is a small part of a massive undertaking and collaboration over a number of years. The current project, with the fieldwork and policy development conducted over the course of 2006–09 goes back to a partnership between the Globalism Institute, RMIT (now the Globalism Research Centre) and the Department for Community Development (DFCD). It was initiated in 2004 as part of an ambitious research-based policy development project focussing on the relationship between livelihood and learning. Dame Carol Kidu, together with the Secretary of the DFCD, Joseph Klapat, travelled to Melbourne in April 2004 to discuss a potential collaboration with the Globalism Research Centre.

Julie Foster-Smith played a crucial role in establishing the initial contact between Dame Carol and the Globalism Research Centre, centrally through Paul James, Martin Mulligan and Peter Phipps. Julie Foster-Smith attended the Melbourne two-day meeting, as did Martin Syder and Roger Southern from RMIT International. Julie continued on with the project as a central advisor on community engagement and methodology questions. Despite poor health she contributed significantly on numerous difficult research sojourns until she could no longer travel. Dame Carol was a constant inspiration—both personal and intellectual—and an ongoing source of guidance that was crucial to the changing nature of our engagement across the complex boundaries of government, civil society and communities. Secretary Klapat was wonderfully generous with his time and wisdom. We could not have done the work without his support, including his leadership in thinking through policy development and how the DFCD-Globalism research team might contribute to that process. Joseph and Dame Carol generously allowed us the independence and space to do much more than provide a basis to a pressing policy process. Whatever rigour this volume has depends upon that space.

The intellectual home of the work is in the Globalism Research Centre and we warmly thank our colleagues, with special thanks to Todd Bennet, Damian Grenfell, Martin Mulligan, Tom Nairn, Heikki Patomäki, Peter Phipps, Andy Scerri, Helen Smith, Manfred Steger and Chris Ziguras.

Many, many other people have contributed to the researching of this volume as part of the larger project: Albert Age, Sama Arua, Kate Cregan, Kelly Donati, Jean Eparo, Beno Erepan, Julie Foster-Smith, Betty Gali-Malpo, Elizabeth Kath, Andrew Kedu, Leo Kolumbu, Stephanie Lusby, Ronnie Mamia, Lita Mugugia, Martin Mulligan, Gibson Oeka, Jalal Paraha, Peter Phipps, Leonie Rakanangu, Isabel Salatiel, Chris Scanlon, Pou Toivita, Kema Vegala, Naup Waup, Mollie Willie, and Joe Yomba. Others have commented on sections of the associated book, and we particularly thank Phillip Darby, Andy Scerri and Martha Macintyre. We thank Jim Robins at the National Research Institute, Papua New Guinea, for advice at crucial junctures. We also thank Steffen Wirth at the Asian Development Bank for offering both encouragement and material support. His gentle cynicism about the achievability of our project aims was matched by his generosity of spirit in making it possible.

Our work in communities was conducted with a number of leaders and activists who facilitated discussions, organized community forums and conversations, and co-ordinated the feedback on community profiles and recommendations. We thank in particular, Gerard Arua, Vanapa, Central Province, Monica Arua, Yule Island, Central Province, Viki Avei, Boera, Central Province, Sunema Bagita, Provisional Community Development Advisor, Milne Bay Province, Mago Doelegu, Alotau, Milne Bay Province, Clement Dogale, Vanagi, Central Province, Jerry Gomuma, Alepa, Central Province, Alfred Kaket, Simbukanam/Tokain, Madang Province, Yat Paol, Bismark Ramu, Madang Province, Joseph Pulayasi, Omarakana, Milne Bay Province, Bing Sawanga, Yalu, Morobe Province, Alexia Tokau, Kananam, Madang Province, and Naup Waup, Wisini Village, Morobe Province.

And last, but most importantly, we thank the communities and individuals of Alepa, Boera, Divinai, Inuma, Kananam, Omarakana, Tokain, Vanagi, Vanapa, Wisini, Yalu, and Yule Island, for your generosity and openness in receiving us into your homes. Our hope is that in the years ahead we will remain intimate outsiders to your communities and wantoks in the mutual struggle for other pathways to sustainable living.