Training Grants to Assist Parents Planning a Return to Work

The Parents Returning to Work Program is a new initiative of the Victorian Government designed to assist parents prepare for re-entry into the workforce.

If you are a parent planning a return to work, you can apply to AMES (Adult Multicultural Education Services) for a grant that entitles you to training at RMIT to assist you with improving your work skills.

Funding up to the value of $1,000 can be used for program fees and training related child-care and support materials e.g. books.

If you are currently enrolled as an RMIT student and meet the grant eligibility criteria, you may be eligible when re-enrolling for your program.

Eligibility

You are eligible for the grant provided you:

▸ Have been caring for dependent children and have not worked for more than four months (full time or equivalent part time) during the last two years
▸ Have at least one child no older than 12 years of age
▸ Plan to return to paid work in the next 12 months
▸ Have previously held paid employment
▸ Are an Australian resident residing in Victoria
