Creative Commons

Creative commons licences allow the use of copyright works for a range of purposes as long as the terms of the creative commons licence is adhered to. The use of Creative commons works is bound by the licence restrictions. It is important to read and understand the terms of creative commons licences, you will find the terms of any creative commons licence by clicking on the licence found on, under or near the work.

The main requirements of creative commons licences are:

- attribution - you must attribute - each creative commons licence contains the attribution requirement.
- non-commercial - the work can only be used for non-commercial purposes.
- no-derivatives - the work must not be used in a derivative form, or you must not create a derivative work from the original work. You must not alter, modify or adapt the work.
- share alike - the work can be adapted, modified, altered, or changed. If you distribute the altered work you need to distribute your new work under a sharealike licence.

Following are licence conditions that are generic to all creative commons licences:

- attribution - all works licensed under creative commons licences must include an attribution or credit statement.
- link - all works used as part of the attribution statement must include a link back to the creative commons deed.
- licence logo - the licence logo can be placed as part of the reference statement.
