The Study and Learning Centre offers many ways for you to boost your studies at RMIT in 2010.

This flyer provides you details of workshops, writing circles and other activities to enhance your postgraduate studies. These are all designed to explore and build on your existing knowledge, expertise and experience.

WORKSHOPS

Coursework students
A series of workshops (including Saturday workshops) for coursework and minor thesis students is run each semester at the main city campus, Business (Building 108) and at the Bundoora campus. Topics include:

- efficient and effective reading strategies
- writing postgraduate essays and reports
- writing a minor thesis
- writing a review of the literature
- writing clearly at postgraduate level
- managing your time as a postgraduate student
- planning and delivering successful presentations.

Research students
The Study and Learning Centre run several workshops (including Saturday workshops) throughout the year as part of the School of Graduate Research ‘On Track’ series of workshops. For more information please go to the School of Graduate Research website rmit.edu.au/graduateresearch
THESIS WRITING CIRCLES

Writing circles provide the opportunity for students to learn from each other by sharing and commenting on their own and each other’s writing. They are suitable for those students who are writing on a regular basis. You will:

- learn useful writing tips and techniques
- critically engage with the literature
- gain peer support and encouragement
- enhance your editing and proofreading skills
- develop efficient and effective writing habits.

WRITING BY APPOINTMENT

Postgraduate students can make 1-hour individual appointments with a language and learning adviser. We will:

- discuss aspects of your thesis with you
- assist you to develop effective and critical reading skills
- give feedback on draft sections of your writing
- help keep you on task
- discuss strategies for improvement.

DROP-IN CENTRES

These are located in Building 12 and Building 108. There are timetabled opening hours where you can improve your writing style, grammar and general study skills. Maths and statistics support are also available.
