Researchers from both the Royal Melbourne Institute of Technology University's School of Property Construction and Project Management, and United States-based Virginia Tech's Centre for innovation in Construction Safety Research, are collaborating on a five-year study to find ways to guarantee occupational heath and safety in projects. The RMIT University researchers have received a $550,000 grant from the US National Institute of Occupational Safety and Health.

© Media Monitors Pty Ltd 2010

This summary may not be provided to any third party for any purpose without the express permission of Media Monitors Pty Limited ABN 11 002 533 851. Summary may be subject to error or omission. Subscribers should refer to the original article before making any financial decisions or forming any opinions.

MENTIONS: RMIT University